Purpose

To enjoy, appreciate and respect the features of the natural environment. To respect the Aboriginal history and presence in our region. To learn about the geology, fauna and flora of the region. To record the species of flora and fauna in our native forests, woodlands, grasslands and wetlands. To protect and promote the conservation of habitat, flora and fauna in natural landscapes.

To gain long-term legislative protection of significant natural areas as National Parks, State Parks, Flora Reserves, Streamside Reserves or Wildlife Reserves.

To understand the principles and practice of environmental management, including the use of fire, control of pathogens and pest plants and animals. To restore degraded natural areas through appropriate revegetation, control of pest plants and animals, or restoration of water regimes in wetlands. To be advocates for the natural environment – to educate and persuade by means of scientific publications, articles in local newspapers, conducted excursions to natural areas, serving on committees of management, participating on government committees and reviews, and by giving assistance to schools and other groups.
